A little boy rode his bicycle joyfully down the quiet street. The sun shone brightly, casting his shadow on the pavement. He pedaled fast, feeling the wind rush through his hair. Laughing, he swerved left and right, pretending to race invisible friends. The wheels spun smoothly as he explored every corner. Suddenly, he hit a small bump and wobbled but quickly regained balance. A dog barked nearby, making him giggle. He rang his tiny bell, announcing his presence. With a big smile, he continued his adventure, dreaming of endless rides.
